BREAKTHROUGH STRATEGIES TO TEACH AND COUNSEL TROUBLED YOUTH

EARN GRAD CREDIT OR 10 PDUS

Graduate Credit Available: $45 tuition payable at door to Seattle Pacific University

Get the latest methods and tools to prevent or manage apathy, substance abuse and negativity. These innovative methods are more effective than conventional approaches, and can end the guessing about how to best manage coping problems. Learn dozens of violence prevention methods, temper and tantrum tamers, impulsiveness-busters, and how to help withdrawn, abused, depressed and sad youth.

Instructor:
Veteran trainer Ruth Herman Wells, M.S. is a columnist for SEEN Magazine, and the author of 21 books. Ruth was named a top 10 U.S. Education Speaker by SpeakerMix in 2011. Ruth knows "all about disruptive kids," says The Oregonian. She has managed model youth programs; her work has been featured in The Orlando Sentinel, The Child Welfare Report, and Adolescence Magazine. Ruth has trained thousands of teachers, counselors, and justice workers throughout North America. Ruth's lively, unorthodox presentation style is compelling and unforgettable. School Skills Problem-Solvers

If you work with kids who don't act like students, then you need our surprising strategies to turn around youth. Discover how to stop the absences, disruption, work refusal, apathy, and non-compliance. Plus, you'll get maximum-strength motivation makers that you'll use every day, along with surprising, unexpected methods to manage ADD, ADHD, disrespect, and Asperger's affected students.

Social Skills Problem-Solvers

Many youth look, act and sound like they lack basic social skills. This workshop is the place to get the newest and best methods to teach personal space and distance, accountability, and positive peer interaction. You'll also get essential information on managing conduct disorders, bullies, gangs and delinquents.
